NARRATOLOGICAL IMPLICATIONS OF TECHNOLOGICALLY
MEDIATED AND IMMERSIVE MEDIA

15-16 September 2021 (Doctoral seminar on 14 September)
Riga, Latvia

DOCTORAL SEMINAR ON-LINE AT ZOOM

14 September 2021
Pre-Conference Doctoral Seminar
10:00-10:20	Opening of the seminar and introduction	Dr. Chris Hales (practice led approach) Dr. Maria Cecilia Reyes (narrative systems in immersive media)
10:20-12:00	A PhD Elevator Pitch	Each student presents 10 minutes (90 minutes)
	Q&A
12:10-12:30	Break
12:30-13:30	Lecture 1	Dr. Chris Hales (practice led approach) The participants will make short presentations about certain aspects of the work. Chris will invoke a “Delphi Method” of anonymous research question generation using an expert panel made up the other participants. Results will be collated and in the second session of the workshop Chris will employ a ranking mechanism which will be used to reveal the most popular responses from the expert panels.
13:30-14:30	Workshop 1 “Research Questions Participatory Workshop”.
14:30-15:00	Lunch break
15:00-16:00	Workshop 2 “Doing PhD Research on New Media Narratives”	Dr. Maria Cecilia Reyes (narrative systems in immersive media) This workshop has been designed to strengthen the PhD proposals in their form and content. During the first part, I will share my experience writing my PhD thesis "Interactive Fiction in Cinematic Virtual Reality: Epistemology, Creation and Evaluation", with a special focus on research methodology on Interactive Digital Narratives, the challenges of theoretical and experimental research, the importance of research networking and academic communities, writing and presenting the thesis. During the second part, we will analyze each PhD proposal through a collaborative activity in which PhD students give feedback to their colleagues addressing topics such as: interactive digital narratives design, theory, evaluation of case studies, applications and impact on society.
16:00-16:30	Conclusions

09:20-10:00	Keynote 1, Dr. Hartmut Koenitz Associate Professor at Södertörn University in Sweden, a visiting researcher at the University of Amsterdam, and a visiting research fellow at Trinity College Dublin The Double dynamic of interactive digital narratives Historically, narratology was concerned with understanding how a fixed artifact can elicit many different meanings. Ever since, the paradigm of „textuality“ has enabled considerable insights into the nature of narration, engendering a rich analytical vocabulary and toolset, for instance, by enabling an understanding of the importance of the reader (e.g. Barthes „death of the author,“) and by facilitating an analysis of related phenomena (e.g. intertextuality (Kristeva), transtextuality (Genette)). Narratological categories have also been applied to the understanding of interactive digital narratives (IDN). Yet, there are a number of unsolved questions in this regard, in terms of the nature of interactivity, the status of the artifact as a dynamic system, the role of the audience as interactors, and that of creators as system builders. Based on these considerable differences, the talk will introduce a specific framework for analyzing IDN and develop an agenda for research, training and application of IDN, especially as tools to understand complexity.
